WORSLEY WANTS

WEST WATERED

Senator A. A. Worsley, candidate for congress on the democratic ticket, spoke to a small crowd on the streets at Mesa Saturday. He had some rather interesting ideas as to what he called necessary amendments to the reclamation laws. The senator stated that if he was elected one of the first things he would do would be to introduce a bill appropriating $200,000,000 for the building of dams and power and irrigating plants in the arid states of the west. This, said the speaker, no doubt would sound like impracticable legislation, but people would only consider that for fifty years the government has appropriated millions upon millions under the rivers and harbors improvement acts, and these vast amounts had been squandered, he pointed out, under the idea that they were for the public good. The speaker argued, however, that the arid states had received comparatively little benefit from the bulk of this expenditure and that naturally great benefit had accrued to the states where the monies had been spent. His claim was that $200,000,000 expended for the purpose above stated would populate these states with 25,000,000 people, who would be the farmers because they would be the farming classes.

This money, he said, should be repaid at the rate of 2 per cent per year for fifty years, so that at the end of that time all obligations should be cancelled. He argued that the Roosevelt project cost the farmers three million dollars more than it needed to, and yet that the three million, even if spent on natural mistakes in the beginning of the building of such great projects, should not be charged to the farmers, but to experience such as would save money on future projects. There are a hundred places in Arizona alone, he argued, where dams could be put in to benefit the people, and many places in adjoining states but at present there is no fund available and so we wait and the arid states suffer in the waiting.

Senator Worsley made the statement that this country has lost 50,000 people to Canada in the last fifteen years and they have gone because the Canadian government made it easy for these farmers to get homes, and said he: "This country cannot afford to lose farmers, for they are workers, they are producers. The only people we can afford to lose are the parasites, those who live off the workers, the saloon keepers and the bankers," from which it may be inferred that the candidate is "fermest" the banker and his bank.

NOW ON RESERVE LIST

Sergeants C. A. Smith and Wilford Biggs and Privates Elmer Coleman and Joseph Pomeroy have returned from Naco, having served their three years as members of Company D of Mesa. Two or three others will be placed on the reserve in a few days.

W. O. W. TO PHOENIX

A number of the members of the Mesa lodge W. O. W. will go to Phoenix this evening to attend the lodge meeting there. The occasion of the visit is the presence of Sovereign Auditor Patterson in Phoenix, and it is desired that the south side members meet him. Refreshments will be served.

NEW SIDEWALKS

The South Central and North schools have been provided with cement walks leading from the grounds to the approaches.

BICYCLE RACES

A bicycle meet to take place about the 8th of September has been arranged for by the Mesa Bicycle Club. There will be races of different distances, the 100 yard, 200 yard, 400 yard, 800 yard, 1600 yard, and 3200 yard. The races will be held at the Mesa track. A number of valuable prizes will be awarded.

OFF FOR VACATION

Dr. G. P. Light and family will leave this morning for a two weeks' trip to Prescott, Flagstaff and other points in northern Arizona.

SPORT COMMENT

[Republican A. P. Leased Wire]
SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 27.—Boys Comstock, track and field coach, is quoted as making the interesting statement that any athlete can develop into a champion in two years.

Comstock turned out the best team that ever represented the University of California. This was in 1912 when the southerners defeated both the University of California and Leland Stanford, Jr. University. Comstock explains his theory as follows:

"Any fellow who can navigate around without the aid of crutches or a cane can be developed into a champion athlete within two years. Present day athletes may be compared to twentieth century agricultural methods—everything intensive. I believe that an athlete will show progress in proportion to his ability to absorb knowledge coupled with the physical capacity to bear up under a daily grind.

"In other words, if exceptional improvements in any event is desired sufficiently to remove the sport element and make it a business the novice may become a champion in a third of the time usually attributed to the acquiring of excellent ability.

"Roughly speaking, I believe two years of daily work with correct coaching will put any able-bodied man in a championship class. If the mental and physical capacity for absorption of knowledge and skill was equal to any strain which might be put upon the results could be attained in less than two years.

"Except in rare instances, however, this is not the case. The brain and body will alternate in revolts against the unnatural strain, and so limit the progress of the ambitious pupil. This leads to a condition which in athletic parlance is termed 'staleness.'

"Staleness, be it of body or mind, is nothing more than a reaction of the system caused by constant repetition of one thing.

"Time and change of interest are the two antidotes for the nausea of staleness. The stronger the mind and body, the quicker the recovery.

"The theory of perfect form in any one event may be explained to any thing athlete on the average in two months. The putting of these fundamentals into practice presents a difficulty.

"The ordinary athlete cannot successfully put into practice the comparatively few points which go to make up form sequence. The event which first must be dissected and presented to the athlete in the easiest manner possible.

"It is practically impossible to give the fundamentals to the pupil as a whole. Not only the coach, but the student, must know the why and wherefore of every movement made. Give me the thinker, in preference to a well-developed body.

"Unlike other sports, track athletes are not always born but can be made."

Statistics kept by the park department of Seattle, Wash., show that in July the attendance on the municipal golf course showed a gain of more than 44 per cent over the best monthly figures of 1915. Gold enthusiasts consider this further evidence of the amazing growth and popularity of the game throughout the country. Few of the larger cities are now without a public course and available figures show that, in many instances, the laying out of the first course has developed players so rapidly that the installation of a second and even a third course has followed.

The number of women who are taking up the game is keeping pace with the men and this is borne out by the fact that the Seattle report shows that additional locker space has been added to their department in order to accommodate them.

That the practice of players carrying their clubs about with them on trips as a part of their regular luggage constantly is growing is attested by a glimpse of any of the great baggage rooms and on the authority of the men who handle the baggage. If any further proof were necessary the Seattle figures show that more than 30 per cent of the total number of players using the municipal links are visitors and tourists.

The check rooms of large hotels, usually contain a bewildering array of clubs and bags belonging to these travelers who carry implements of the game with them in order to indulge their favorite sport wherever they happen to be.

PHONE MAN
ELECTROCUTED
AT ROOSEVELT

(Special to The Republican)
ROOSEVELT, Aug. 27.—J. M. Shepherd, aged 24, an employee in the equipment department of the Mountain States Telephone Company at Globe, was instantly killed by electrocution on the top of a high tension tower above the dam here early this morning. He had come to Roosevelt the evening before with a motor party, and just after breakfast, told his friends he was going to the highest point around here, presumably for the view.

The first intimation that an accident had taken place came when some of the party, missing Shepherd, searched and found a body hanging to the wires near the pole on top of the hill just south of the dam. Meanwhile, the body had been observed through field glasses from the hotel, and sheriff Jeff Adams, of Maricopa, hurried over and took charge. It was two hours later that electricians from the power house succeeded in bringing the body down. The clothing was practically burned off.

J. M. Shepherd was a member of the force working in Globe on the installation of some new central office equipment. He was unmarried, and his home was in Chillicothe, Mo., where the body will be sent for burial. He leaves a sister in Denver, besides his mother at home. He had been employed in this line of work for two years, was a good workman and well liked by everybody.

Local Mountain States employees expressed wonder that Shepherd should have been a victim of the high tension juice. He was familiar with its dangers and was presumed to know how to avoid them.

Child Fatally Hurt
Luis Martinez, aged five years, was perhaps fatally injured early last morning when, in attempting to cross in front of three rapidly approaching automobiles about four miles east on the Tempe road, he was struck and knocked down by a machine driven by R. A. Woods of Chandler, Tomacita Martinez, mother of the boy, and a young girl, a friend of the family, were in a ranch house near the road, and hearing the child scream ran out toward the road just in time to see him bowled over by the machine.

Realizing that he could hardly avoid striking the child, Woods applied his emergency brakes and in some measure reduced the force of the impact. He immediately stopped, picked up the child and mother and drove at top speed to the office of Dr. L. Boido in this city, where every possible artificial respiration was given. For a time the child retained consciousness, but later lapsed into unconsciousness. Examination revealed concussion of the brain, possible fracture of the skull and several serious lacerations in the scalp.

As in the Glendale accident, no blame can attach to any person. The child, in attempting to cross the road, became confused when three machines were seen to be approaching and in attempting to avoid two, he struck the third. The mother of the injured child lives in the city and was spending the day with friends east of this city.

THOUSANDS TAKE PART IN GREAT CATHOLIC CONVENTION

Cardinal Gibbons (arrow) and his staff at the annual convention of the American Federation of Catholic Societies in New York city; pontifical mass at St. Patrick's Cathedral, New York.

Many thousands of Catholics from all over the United States are in New York this week, attending the 55th annual convention of the American Federation of Catholic Societies. "Catholic Week" was opened with a pontifical high mass at St. Patrick's Cathedral which was made notable by the presence of three cardinals, including Cardinal Gibbons, and apostolic delegate and a lay attendance of unusual prominence.

We take this opportunity to thank the Merchants and Professional Men for their support and wish to state that we will issue the directory of the Salt River Valley on or about November 15th.

The Directory will contain the added essential features which we have explained in detail when taking orders and information. Our competitors have seen fit in the past to put these features in their California Directories and as the citizens here have always paid as fair price for their Directories as elsewhere we take this opportunity of asking why Phoenix has not been given those essential sections which go to make up a complete Directory.

We do not doubt but now that we are in competition with them, that should they publish another directory it will contain these necessary features.

It is to be remembered that the first two Directories published by our opposition were printed in Los Angeles and those that followed would also have been, had it not been for opposition from a printing company located in this city.

We ask only fair play.

IN ANSWER
Citizens of Phoenix—

Does it not appeal more to your humorous side than the serious, that Los Angeles capitalists who have no further interests in this community than to exploit their business and who for the past few years have been fortunate enough to receive the support of the business men, in the form of subscriptions for advertising and contracts, should become imbued with the perverted idea that they have a deed to the directory business in Phoenix and that they above all other lines of business should be guaranteed no fair opposition.

They have objected to the use of the name Arizona Directory Publishing Company, so we have had ALL our contracts re-signed under the name of Walsh & Fitzgerald.
